

Ash

Ash is one of the most common trees in Ireland.

It can grow up to 35 metres and usually has a long, straight trunk.

The leaves grow in pairs along a single stalk, with one leaf at the end.

Ash seeds grow in clusters on a branch and are long and thin.

Birds

and small mammals like to eat these seeds.

The wood from the Ash tree is used for making hurls, walking sticks and guitars, as it is very strong.
